RELIEF BOARD TO RETURN HOPKIN'S ULTIMATUM TO PA.

Can Contribute $1,250,000 From Liquor Stores Monthly

BUCKS CO. GETS $20,000

Allocations Are Made for the Month of August By State Board

(Copyright, 1934, by I. N. S.)
HARRISBURG, July 24—The State Emergency Relief Board will return Harry L. Hopkin's ultimatum that the state share in the relief load beginning with September, with a reply that $1,250,000 a month from the state liquor stores is the greatest amount it can raise, it was learned today.

Whether that amount will be considered a "reasonable" share of the approximately $10,000,000 being spent monthly for relief in this state, can be answered only by Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator. If the offer is satisfactory, it will obviate the necessity for a special session of the legislature, it is believed.

Democratic leaders meanwhile left for Washington last night, to appeal to the administration to continue the flow of relief funds into Pennsylvania.

In the party were: Joseph F. Guffy, candidate for Senator; Representative Charles Rhodes, candidate for Superior Court Judge; David L. Lawrence, State Chairman. They had an appointment with Marvin H. McIntyre, President Roosevelt's secretary.

Decision to inform Hopkins that $1,250,000 is the limit, was reached at yesterday's executive session of the board at Mt. Gretna, a member of the board said.

Governor Pinchot, chairman, probably will send the information to Hopkins in reply to the latter's letter, mailed before he sailed for Europe.

A total of $7,928,704 was allocated by the Board at the meeting, leaving a balance of $9,023,217 from the Federal grant, for August, with which to meet works relief payrolls, for the month. No specific allocation was made for works relief.

The following allocations for direct relief were made to the counties for August: Bucks, $20,000; Delaware, $96,476.66; Montgomery, $73,461.66; Philadelphia, $1,770,241.03. Additional food relief grants were made as follows: Bucks County, $60,000; Delaware County, $14,000; Montgomery, $30,000.

Mother of Four Found Dead, Victim of Gas

MORRISVILLE, July 24—Mrs. Dorothy Steele, 49 years old, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of her home at 254 Osborne avenue, Morrisville, yesterday. Police said it was suicide.

The woman was found by her husband, Frank, who immediately asked Trenton police for an inhalator. One was dispatched to the Steele home and members of the Union Fire Company, of Morrisville, also went to the home with their apparatus.

When Mrs. Steele failed to respond to the respiratory methods, Dr. George A. Union pronounced her dead. Steele said his wife had been in ill health for some time, returning only last week from a sanitarium, where she had undergone treatment.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Steele leaves four children, Dorothy, Ruth, Robert and Marjorie.

Constable Andrew R. Thompson, of Morrisville, and Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks County Coroner, investigated.

FILE SUITS TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR INJURIES

Bucks Countians Make Claims For $7,000 as Result of Accidents

OCCURRED ON DEC. 4TH

Bucks Countians are the plaintiffs in an action in trespass filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County, in which damages amounting to $7,000 are claimed, with William Davis, 721 Linden street, Allentown, as the defendant.

In a statement of claim, one of the plaintiffs, William K. Whaland, of West Rockhill, alleges that he and his daughter were riding in a car December 4, 1933, near Headman's toll house south of Quakertown, when their car was struck by a car operated by the defendant.

Miss Mary E. Whaland, twenty-year-old minor plaintiff, was operating her father's car when the accident took place.

Claiming $5000 in her own right she alleges she suffered numerous injuries including a broken left leg, cuts about her face, and chest injuries. Prior to the accident she was employed in a factory at Perkasie, but was compelled to remain home for a period of 17 weeks during which she received no wages.

For scars and disfigurement, she hopes to recover the sum of $1000.

The father seeks to recover the sum of $2000 for hospital bills, medical aid and the loss of his car.

Following the accident the young woman was removed to the Quakertown Community Hospital, where she underwent treatment. She is a resident of West Rockhill township.

Mrs. Helen Saslaw, who is employed at Camp Hofnung, at Tohickon Park, north of Pipersville, has filed a libel in divorce in the Court of Common Pleas, here, charging her husband, Lewis Saslaw, with cruel and barbarous treatment.

Saslaw is at the present time residing at 210 Dallas Road, Willow Grove.

THE PRICE OF A MANAGED ECONOMY

By FRANK KNOX

Editor and Publisher of the Chicago Daily News

What is a "managed economy"? The expression is used constantly by various members of the Brain Trust. Some of them have been candid enough to say that a "managed economy" in the United States is their real objective. There is no mystery about a "managed economy." It is the complete opposite of everything represented by our system of individual liberty and initiative. It means complete and dictatorial control not only of all the agencies of production—and therefore of those who produce—but also of the press, radio and all other means of public expression of individual and collective opinion. "Managed Economy" means complete subservience of the people to a bureaucratic program, whether they approve or disapprove. By whatever route it is reached, it is the same thing—whether by the Nazism of Hitler, the Fascism of Mussolini and Dolfuss, or the Communism of Stalin. The present Administration is so definitely headed that way, that every American citizen should know what it means and what its effect would be in these heretofore free United States. With that idea in mind, the Courier reproduces, in a series beginning today, a number of studies of "managed economy" in the countries where it has been carried into effect, these studies having been made and published by Mr. Frank Knox, editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

ARTICLE ONE

WHAT PRICE REGIMENTATION?

Rome, Italy, May 12.

Italy, one of the first countries to resort to managed economy, and with perhaps greater experience in its practice than any other country, supplies to the rest of the world exceptional opportunities for study of the effect of such a system upon popular democratic institutions, upon individual liberty, upon economic freedom of action for both employer and employee, and finally upon the cost of government and the consequent tax burden.

What has been the cost of the managed economy imposed upon Italy under the Mussolini dictatorship?

It has destroyed every vestige of popular parliamentary government. The government is Il Duce.

Freedom of speech, freedom of the press and of assembly, right of petition—there is none.

Taxation without representation is universal, for the poor as well as for the rich.

Labor is compulsory, and capital finds its only safe employment in government bonds.

Both industry and industrial workers are subject to rule in which neither has any voice. Industry cannot expand, contract or discontinue without government approval, and labor organizations for bargaining purposes are nonexistent. Both earnings for industry and wages for labor are fixed by government edict.

That is only a partial summary of the sacrifices of rights and liberties which Italians have made in the interest of a managed economy. Such self-abnegation surely should be paid for in economic values.

What is the score of a dozen years of Fascism in Italy?

The public debt has mounted this year to the staggering total of 102,000,000,000 lire, according to government statistics. [At current exchange, the lira is worth 8.53 cents in American money, or about 11.7 to the dollar.] But to this must be added another 50,000,000,000 lire of debts not included in the government's figures. Thus, the total debt of Italy today is over 150,000,000,000 lire, or about $13,000,000,000. Five years ago it was 111,000,000,000 lire, or about $9,500,000,000.

The budget for governmental expenses in 1928 showed a surplus of income over expenses of 555,000,000 lire. The budget for 1933 showed a DEFICIT of 3,663,000,000 lire.

Both the debt and the budget figures disclose a disquieting tendency toward ultimate national bankruptcy.

Last year taxes in Italy consumed approximately THIRTY-EIGHT PERCENT of the total national income. This is far beyond the danger line. It spells disaster unless taxes are sharply reduced.

And what has managed economy done for employment? In January, 1930, there were approximately 500,000 unemployed. But in January, 1934, there were more than 1,150,000 out of work.

Can any one outside of the circle of the brain trust in Washington find anything in this record for America to imitate?

SUN AGAIN DEVASTATING WITH TERRIFIC RAYS

Back On Job Again; Brought Widespread Crop Damage; Took 500 Lives

90 BEFORE NIGHTFALL

CHICAGO, July 24—A devastating sun which has taken the shocking toll of more than 500 lives and brought wide-spread damage to crops while relentlessly pouring heat onto the country east of the Rockies, during the past six days, was back on the job again today.

The deadly toll of human life and heat prostrations was felt most severely in the Middle-West, although sections of New England and the southern states were heavily affected, with an ever increasing total in Chicago since the record-breaking heat gripped the city. Twenty-four perished yesterday, while C. A. Donnell, weather forecaster, predicted no relief for today. He said he expected the thermometer to reach 100 degrees.

In Philadelphia, the weather bureau declared the thermometer would again climb into the 90s before nightfall. No heat deaths were reported yesterday.

HIBERNIANS DROP CLOSE GAME TO DAMP WASH

Single by Brescia in Seventh Helps Laundrymen To Win

FINAL SCORE IS 4 TO 3

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Schedule for Tonight
J. A. C. vs. INDEPENDENTS

By T. M. Juno

The Hibernians dropped another close decision last night on Leedom's field when they were given a 4-3 cleaning up by the Damp Wash A. A. A single by "Nigger" Brescia in the seventh inning paved the way for the laundrymen's triumph.

Brescia came to the plate in the seventh with Mulligan on base as the result of a double. Two were out at the time and Brescia immediately delivered a hit down the first base line to score Mulligan.

It was really a tough battle for Cooper to lose. Cooper held the Washers to five hits and only in that seventh did the winners make more than one safe blow in an inning. However, Cooper's wildness also aided in his downfall. He passed four batters and hit another. In the fifth, the Washers' two tallies were the result of his wildness.

Dillinger To Be Buried In Plot Beside Mother

By George C. Gallati

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO, July 24—(INS)—While the bullet-pierced body of John Dillinger was prepared today for a 200-mile trip in a hearse it was disclosed that two ex-convicts and the mysterious "woman in red" sold out America's super-outlaw for the reward money and to avenge an old love rivalry.

Through a wall of secrecy maintained by Federal sleuths came reports that "the woman in red," who was with Dillinger as he left the Biograph Theatre to be ambushed and slain, was under heavy guard to prevent gangland vengeance.

The first tip concerning Dillinger's general whereabouts and the fact that his penchant for the movies was taking him to the Biograph Theatre with each change of program, came from a groatman informer, Police Captain Timothy O'Neill of East Chicago revealed.

Bit by bit the trap was laid with the help of information from others hungry for the reward on Dillinger's head.

What part "the woman in red" played in putting the "finger on" the desperado, O'Neill refused to say.

In a hearse brought here by the home town, Mooresville, Ind., by the aged farmer-father of the desperado, Dillinger's remains today were to be taken to Maywood, suburb of Indianapolis, for the funeral services. He will be buried in Crown Hill Cemetery beside the bodies of his mother and step-mother.

Dillinger's slaying had hardly been pronounced "justifiable homicide" by a coroner's jury before Federal investigators under Melvin Purvis, chief of the Department of Investigation here, took steps to trap the remaining five members of Dillinger's ruthless gang of outlaws still at liberty.

Their weakness for women, the same which lured Dillinger himself into the range of Federal agents' guns, will be employed to trap the five, George "Baby Face" Nelson, Homer Van Meter, Joseph Fox, John Hamilton and Joseph Burns.

FEDERAL SCHOOL AID

It is not easy to get at the exact figures showing the extent to which the Federal Government has contributed financially to public education this year. Dr. Zook, retiring United States commissioner of education, says it "runs up high into the hundreds of millions."

The reason accurate figures are hard to obtain is because the aid was forthcoming from various agencies, and the expenditures, in some cases, had an indirect relation to education. Of the Federal contributions, $31,500,000 was made by the Federal relief emergency administration. The reconstruction finance corporation established a revolving fund of $75,000,000 for the making of loans. The civil works administration and the public works administration also did their part by supplying funds for use in repairing school buildings and erecting new ones. Some of the money also went for beautifying buildings.

Dr. Zook, addressing the National Education Association, stressed the fact that the administration had sought to avoid committing itself to Federal Aid for education as a permanent policy. The gifts and loans made were regarded as necessary to meet an emergency, some of the money going for the relief of unemployed teachers.

The retiring commissioner revealed that the administration was able to hold to its position in making federal aid to schools merely a part of its relief program "in the face of tremendous pressure on the part of a large proportion of the teaching profession."

This is significant as indicating what is to be expected in the future. It takes no prophet to see that this pressure will be increased next year. Proponents of permanent Federal school aid will see in the help given this year an opening wedge for their plan. They must be defeated in their further efforts.

THE AUTO PERIL

A total of 11,780 persons have been killed by motor vehicles so far this year in the United States.

More shocking is the fact that these figures represent an increase of 2,000 motor fatalities as compared with the same period last year.

What is the reason for this jump? The most plausible explanation probably is the increased number of automobiles in use as result of improved business conditions. Sales of new cars this year have been running high. Old cars that had been in storage have been hauled out and again placed in commission, and the purchase of used cars has shown a big increase.

The automobile peril has reached a point in seriousness that makes it one of the most important public problems of today. Practically no headway, it appears, is being achieved in solving it.

What the slaughter will be a few years hence when normal prosperity may have returned is a question to excite alarm and to challenge the most thoughtful minds of the nation.

Something must be done. All concede this. But what to do, none seems able to say.

In Measured Phrase

THRU MISTS OF HAPPY TEARS

Seek not for Spring where man presides,
But go where Nature hides,
Where Pixies romp and Fairies play,
Where Gnomes and Elfin flicker
When silver moonlight bides the night,
Gold sunshine splashes days,
All Nature then in formal rights
Tribute to Spring-time pays.

Go see the joyous sun-kissed Brook
Thru tangled covert purr;
Go spy the graceful Water-cress
Its tangy leaves unfurl;
See golden sunlight flicker thru
A web of spidery Fern
O'er dew-drop laden mossy couch
Where blue-lip Violets yearn.

But first recall child-heart that thrills
At every bird and bee
Get youthful eyes that sparkle bright
Each "imagined" Mystery.
Cast off the cynic masquerade,
Acquired thru faded years
Again, see World in Rain-bow tints,
Thru Mists of happy tears.

SHORT CUTS TO THE DINNER TABLE

By Vera A. Schneider

New Uses For Old Sweet-Honey Should Be Drizzled Not Poured.

Honey, to be used successfully, should be drizzled and not poured. It is better so, for a little gives just the sweetness desired and intensifies the natural flavor—a lot of thick honey poured on any dish makes it entirely too sweet. Warm honey is thin and drizzles perfectly, therefore, may I suggest that the honey jar be placed in warm—NOT HOT—water for about ten minutes before using? Then when you are ready to flavor the food, the honey is just the right consistency to drizzle tiny threads instead of pouring a heavy stream.

Honey is a delicious garnish for whipped cream. The color effect is beautiful when whipped cream is left unsweetened and honey drizzled over it. Just trickle tiny golden threads about the whipped cream and watch your family and guests' faces light up with satisfaction when they take the first taste.

Suppose I give you several suggestions for this old, but ever new delicacy. As a sandwich filling it blends beautifully with cream cheese, chopped nuts, raisins and celery, chopped carrots, peanut butter, and many other combinations. You'll find them all different and delicious, easy to make and most appetizing.

In sandwiches, plain, rolled, ribbon or tier, honey assures additional flavor, keeps the sandwich moist and holds the thin slices of bread together.

Honey sweetened fruitades, iced tea or coffee are also refreshing. The amount of honey required, of course, depends on the individual taste. Blend the honey with a bit of warm water, add to beverage and then ice. In hot drinks, add the quantity desired.

Toast spread with honey-cinnamon paste, honey nut paste, or honey fruit paste makes a delightful tea or luncheon service. And the way to make this paste is just by mixing spice, nuts or fruit with honey to the spreading consistency.

And now, suppose we have a Sunday dinner menu.

"IDEAL SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XXIV

The two quarrelsome inseparables, Clendening and Cross, were among the witnesses summoned. Cross, looking very healthy, sought my sympathy at once.

"It's absolutely inconsiderate, making me come all the way up here," he complained. "They should have held the inquest at the cottage, if they had to hold one at all, don't you think so, Mr. Fowler?"

"They probably won't keep you more than a few minutes," I said. Clendening interrupted with a short, sardonic laugh.

"It won't hurt a big fat hunk like you," he said. "I wish my heart was as good as yours."

"If yours were as bad as mine, you'd probably be dead!" Cross retorted angrily. "Why, the specialist in New York told me—"

"I know what he told you, Milton. My lord, I've heard it often enough! He probably told you you had a bad heart just to get rid of you."

A deputy sheriff stepped through the door of the manager's office and called, "Mr. Cross! Mr. Cross!"

"You don't have to yell at me," Cross replied with great dignity. "I'm coming."

The crowd made way for him and he walked to the door at his usual slow, timorous gait. Clendening sat down in a chair. He was pale and his respiration was rapid.

"What's the news of Lakeside?" I asked.

Clendening grinned. He took off his glasses and began to polish them. His eyes looked strange and uneasy without the spectacles.

"Milton got in a temper last night and smashed my record of 'Waiting For You.' I'm afraid I annoyed the poor sick fellow, playing it so much."

"You seem very interested in that record," I remarked.

He replaced his glasses and looked at me. "I hear your friend Hilley's a buddy of Finn's now," he said. "If he's trying to solve Vail's murder, it might pay him to listen to that record."

"What do you mean?"

"That record means something! I don't know what yet, but there's some reason that particular record was on the phonograph when we found Vail. I've been studying the words. I copied them all before Cross got sore and smashed it."

"You think there's some significance in the words?"

He nodded solemnly. "It's there, all right. Sometimes I seem just about to understand it." He sighed. "But it always gets away from me."

Cross came out of the room then and Clendening's name was called.

"Tell Hilley to look into it," he said and then he went to give his testimony. Cross went directly to the portico in back of the building, got in the waiting bus and was driven back to his cottage, looking as though he expected to be fatally stricken. I saw Ruxton on the other side of the foyer and went to join him.

"How are you?" I asked. He replied. He did not look it, but it was one of the conventions of the sanatorium that most patients never admitted to feeling badly. Ruxton sat with his chin in the palm of his hand, and he glanced away from me the moment he had spoken. Apparently he did not want to talk. I respected his wish and left him.

I smiled as I thought of Clendening's rather childish belief that the banal words of Vail's favorite song had some hidden and significant meaning. But, as no news was too trivial for Mark, I decided to repeat it to him. Presently I went outside, lit a cigarette and began to stroll around the grounds. As I passed Anderson's office I could see the several reporters sitting by the window. They were all leaning forward, looking very alert, and I wondered how much of the truth they were hearing. Later I learned that

Finn and the district attorney had conspired to present the case very cleverly, stressing Joe's tenuous connection with it and passing very lightly over the inexplicable circumstance of the photograph. The exchange of rooms between Vail and Ruxton was not even mentioned, but much was made of Joe Barker's acquaintance with Felipa and Felipa's flight.

The verdict of the jury, returned late in the afternoon, was that Vail died at the hands of some person or persons unknown and that Joe Barker died by his own hands. The implication was exactly what Anderson had wanted: that the evidence against Joe was not legally conclusive, but that there was little reason to doubt that he was the murderer. That evening we learned that Finn considered the case closed and was leaving the sanatorium the next day.

Dave Finn was not an intelligent man, but he had the shrewdness, the talent for survival, common to politicians. The management of Sherwood Forest Sanatorium had wanted the investigation of Vail's murder closed as quickly as possible. Recognizing the political importance of that wealthy community, Finn had been most anxious to oblige, and Joe's death had given him his opportunity. The inquiry was unofficially closed. Nevertheless, Finn was not at all convinced that Joe had murdered Seifert Vail, and, though he concealed these doubts from the sanatorium officials, he did not want to leave without providing against possible unexpected developments.

It was natural that he should go to Mark for assistance. The day after the inquest, before he and his deputies went back to town, he made a quiet and hurried visit to Mark's room. Mark told me about it, imitating the sheriff's heavy voice and slyly exaggerating Finn's important official manner.

"I'm a minister without portfolio," he said. "I'm an unofficial ambassador. I'm the sheriff's eyes and ears and brain here, and if you ask me, I'm a great improvement on the original. Finn has made a strategic retreat, but he's keeping his rear well covered. If anything happens while he's away, I'm to let him know, so he won't be caught napping."

"He didn't have much trouble persuading you to accept the job, did he?" I asked.

Mark laughed. "No," he said. "I'm not bashful, you know." His laughter increased. "Finn was in a spot. He wanted to see me, but he was scared to death. I'd go poking around digging up a lot of embarrassing information. He couldn't ask me not to in so many words, and Finn isn't a very good diplomat."

He sat up in bed and, with a worried frown, began tugging at an imaginary mustache. It was such a good burlesque of the sheriff's usual manner that I burst into laughter. When Mark spoke, his voice was ponderous and slightly embarrassed.

"Just keep your eyes open, Mr. Hilley," he quoted the sheriff. "Of course, I don't expect anything to happen. The case is practically washed up. But you never can tell when something's going to break. Just take it easy and let things ride, but let me know if anything happens."

He became himself again and, reaching over, pulled a photograph from under some magazines on his bedside table.

"Here's an enlargement of the photograph of the murderer he gave me for a souvenir. When I've solved the case, I'm going to ask him to autograph it—if he can write."

I looked at the picture, magnified many times. The original had shown the vague, blurred outline of part of a man's back in a break in the foliage behind Lakeside Cottage. The enlargement had magnified that overalls torso, but had made it only more indistinct. I looked at it, shaking my head.

"You could magnify it a million diameters, and it still wouldn't show anything," Mark said as he took it back. "Poor Finn! It seems as though the murderer was in cahoots with everybody to bedevil him."

"Are you going to let things ride, as Finn asked you?"

"You should know me better than that. You know what a nasty prying keyhole pecking sort of mind I have. Let things ride, heck! I'm going right on with my quiet little investigation, and you're going to help me. I want you to take a little trip for me."

He picked up a blue-covered time-table from the stand beside him and opened it.

"I've been reading time-tables," he said, "not that I expect to use them myself soon, but just out of curiosity. Finn seems to have forgotten it, but you may remember that Vail was expecting a visitor the day he was killed. I thought the visitor was right here in the sanatorium, but there's a possibility that it was someone from New York."

"When Finn found out that one of the taxi drivers in Cold Valley had driven anyone here just after rest period, he decided that the visitor didn't come from outside. But remember, Vail wanted to see that person very privately. If I wanted to see someone without the whole sanatorium knowing it, I wouldn't let him get off the train at Cold Valley. I'd tell him to get off one station above or one below and get a taxi there. It wouldn't be a much longer ride, and it would be a lot more private."

"There's an idea!" I exclaimed. "Why didn't someone think of it sooner?"

"I should have," Mark admitted. "I hope the trail's not too cold now. But last week there were so many other things that for a while I forgot the mysterious visitor." He opened the time-table. "The afternoon train that arrives at Cold Valley at 3:02 gets to the station below, Echoville, at 2:49. It arrives at the station above Cold Valley at 3:18."

"That would be too late," I said. "If you wanted to get to the sanatorium just at 3:30 you'd have to get off either at Cold Valley or Echoville."

Mark nodded. "Smart boy. By a process of elimination, it appears that Echoville's the place. I want you to go there this afternoon, right after lunch. Don't drive down, take a taxi. See if you can find any taxi driver there who brought anyone to the san last Thursday afternoon."

Immediately after lunch I set out on my mission. My taxi summoned from Cold Valley. As I drove down the long road through the woods that led to the entrance of the sanatorium, I wondered how I could make my inquiries without seeming too officious. I regretted that I had not discussed it with Mark, but after some hard thinking I found a way. I settled back in my seat, very much pleased with my ingenuity.

We rolled through the gates of the sanatorium and out on the smooth state highway. It was fairly cool riding, but the country showed the effects of the long heat wave. The grass was sere and the leaves of the trees were drooping and lustreless. We passed a few poor, scattered farms, a golf course, and several frame summer hotels on whose verandas women rocked and fanned themselves and gossiped. It took us about twenty minutes to reach Echoville, and there at the railroad station I dismissed the taxi.

EVENING CAPES OF REAL GOLD THREAD WORN BY PRINCESSES

By Nadia De Beau

(L. N. S. Fashion Correspondent) PARIS (INS) — Probably one of the most picturesque features of the spring season in Paris is the arrival of the Indian princes, who fill all the smart restaurants, adding a picturesque note to the old city. The men are not distinguishable from Europeans except for the darkness of their skins. It is their numerous wives, who create mild sensations along the Parisian boulevards by the brilliance of their saris, and the exotic beauty of their faces.

The extremely pretty young Princess of Karputhala is often seen in the streets clothed in pastel colored saris with her equally young husband. In the evening, magnificent evening capes cover the native costumes, often woven of real gold thread. The Maharajah of Cooh Behar had a magnificent cape of silver fox at the Crillon, the four heads of which came together at the back of the waist.

PLAN THE SLEEPING ROOMS FOR HOURS OF RESTFUL SLUMBER

By Rhadena Armstrong (Home Economics Representative)

Sleeping rooms should be carefully planned to provide restful sleep. Since about one-third of each day is spent in resting and sleeping in such rooms, the vigor of the individual for the other two-thirds of the day depends upon the way the sleeping room serves its purpose.

Many sleeping rooms have been planned to please the eye, some as a place to sleep, while others combine the artistic with the restful. While artistic choice of furnishings and their arrangement provide a restful atmosphere, attention also must be given to those details which contribute to rest and health.

Good ventilation is essential, she declares. Windows which will open from both top and bottom or are so placed that they give cross-ventilation are most desirable. Wall papers, simple in design and soft and restful in coloring, are suitable. Pictures and accessories should be few and suggestive of rest and quiet.

Bed furnishings are of primary importance. Springs have some bearing upon the rest, but the mattress and bedding contribute much to the results of the rest period. The mattress should be light enough to be easily handled. Airing of this is important, because the body gives off certain waste materials during sleep. The mattress does not need to be thick and bulky. Innerspring construction padded enough to be comfortable and easily handled is to be preferred over the hard, bulky mattress. Bedding, too, should be light in weight and large enough to be tucked under the mattress and thus kept smooth and in place.

Window shades should be opaque to light and drawn to cover all the window except the portion which is open. This will help in the early morning hours. Placing the bed so that the sleeper does not face the window also is helpful.

Check your sleeping room so that your eight hours in bed bring that amount of rest from the fatigue of yesterday and in preparation for the work of tomorrow. To rate high the room must be simple and restful in color and furnishings. It must be in as quiet a part of the house as possible, it must be dark, and the bed must be properly equipped.

THIS SYMBOL

What Does It Mean To You?

You meet it in the center of town. You meet it at the country crossroad. You meet it pretty much everywhere in between.

It may bring to mind only vague impressions of millions of telephones—service across town or across the seas—an army of men and women unobtrusively keeping the wheels of service moving—an industry owned by three-quarters of a million people like you, your friends, your neighbors.

SIZE, however mammoth, does not signify merit. Bell service is worth your approval only if the job is everlastingly well done, only if the service is better today than yesterday.

In that task is engaged an organization of men and women who, just like the people who own it, are your friends and neighbors—close to the everyday service itself—sensitive to public need—with no "high pressure" complex—sticking to their knitting in, thoroughgoing American fashion, a fashion which has not been outmoded.

WHEN our people and service lose those dominant characteristics we shall haul down this symbol. It's a service dedicated to universal need; and the telephone organization urges your most exacting use of it.

HARRIMAN NO-NAMES SET BACK WHITE ELEPHANTS

The Harriman No Names, with "Joe" Conti in the box, set back the White Elephants, 6-3, in a Junior League game played on Leedom's Field yesterday.

This gives the No Names undisputed possession of first place in the Second Half race.

Both clubs made four hits but the Sixth Ward boys bunched theirs in the first two frames to count five times.

"Dick" VanAken continued his great stick work, getting two of the No Names four bingles.

Bristol Cubans Win Ball Game at Trenton

The Bristol Cubans traveled to Trenton Sunday and gave a fine exhibition of baseball and defeated the fast Trenton Black Sox by a score of 4 to 3.

The game was played on the car-shop field before a large crowd.

Two bad innings proved disastrous to Hammond who had allowed but eight scattered hits and breezed fifteen Cubans via the strikeout route. For three innings the Cubans couldn't touch Hammond's curves. In the third inning, a walk and two hits counted for two runs and the Black Sox in their half of the third, counted for one marker. The Cubans came back in the fifth to score two more runs on Bingham's error which proved to be fatal to the Black Sox.

Thompson pitched steady ball until the eighth when he weakened, allowing the Black Sox to bunch four hits for two runs, but they were on the short end of the score. In the ninth the Sox had the tying run on second when Butts hit into a double play.

Long and Gibson with two hits apiece, led the locals at bat, while Dayton performed best for the losers.

On Thursday the Cubans will travel to Filmont and will endeavor to win their thirteenth straight.

BRISTOL A. A. TO PLAY AT HULMEVILLE TONIGHT

There is no Lower Bucks County League game scheduled for Bristol tonight. But at Hulmeville, the Bristol A. A. team, second half leaders, will battle with the first half champions, Cornwells will play the Parkland team at Parkland.

There is quite some interest scattered in the Bristol-Hulmeville battle and most of the fans will be at Hulmeville tonight to see how these teams shape up together, if by chance, Bristol should win the second half.

Both games are scheduled to begin at 6.30 o'clock.

Jones held the Hibernians to six hits and incidentally four of these were doubles. He ran into trouble in the last frame when Gaffney opened with a double and McCafferty reached base on an error. But Jones showed his prowess here and fanned both Warner and Flynn and forced Riola to lift a short fly to Nicols.

The Hibs counted their first marker in the second when Cooper doubled and scored on a hit by McCafferty. Two more were added in the fifth when Gaffney singled and scored on Warner's double. An error by Fekner counted Warner.

A hit by Nicols and an error by Flynn gave the Washers their first tally while Cooper's wild pitching scored two more in the fifth.

P. R. R. Places Order For New Type Electric Engines

Orders have just been placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad for twenty-eight electric passenger locomotives to cost over $6,000,000.

The new engines will be of the same general type as those now in regular passenger service between New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Paoli. The cab, however, has been re-designed, giving the engine more grace and symmetry of line.

Each end of the new locomotive will slope gently inward from the shoulders running toward the central floor to the cab roof, with rounded operating compartment. Location of the engineman's control position in the center instead of at the ends of the cab will make possible a locomotive generally more attractive and pleasing to the eye.

The engines will be part of the fleet of one hundred and one new electric locomotives with which the railroad will inaugurate through electric service for both passenger and freight trains between New York and Washington early next year. Their construction is included in the road's huge improvement and employment project, financed by P. W. A., which involves not only roadway electrification work between New York and Washington and the new electric locomotive program, but also the building of seven thousand freight cars at the Pennsylvania's shops.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company will build twelve of the new electric, the General Electric Company five, and the railroad's Altoona Works will assemble the other eleven, the propulsion equipment for which will be supplied by the electrical companies. Construction of these twenty-eight engines will provide 2,500,000 man hours of work in the shops of the electrical companies and the railroad, in addition to increasing employment in the basic industries supplying materials and parts.

daughter, Ruth Elaine, 3 years old, escaped with a few scratches. The child and her father returned home later in the day. The youngster was thrown some distance from the car.

The bus is owned by the Public Service Corporation and was said to have been driven by Bernard Brady, of Ashland.

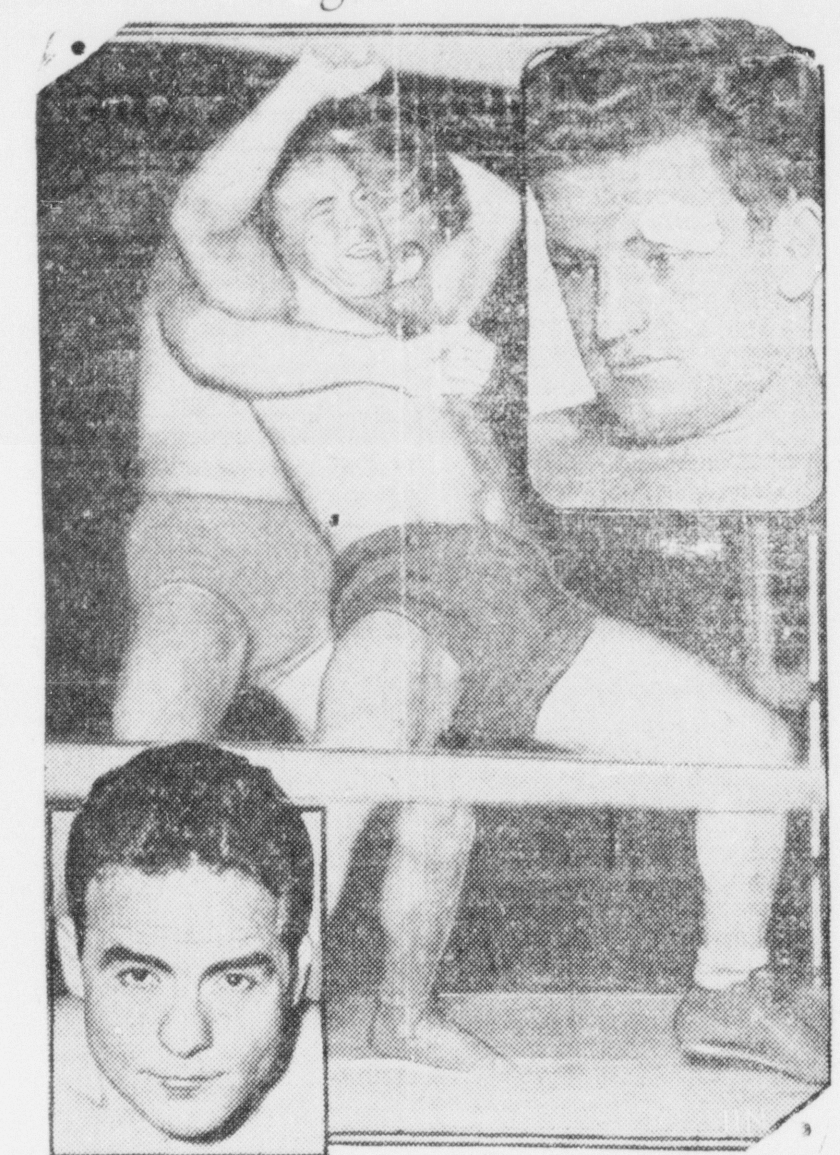

A Perkaskie woman is in Montgomery Hospital, Norristown, and several other persons were shaken up or slightly hurt, in a motor accident at Norristown, yesterday.

The injured woman is Mrs. Elizabeth Maugle, 55 South Third street, Perkaskie. She suffered a laceration of the forehead, and a possible head injury. She was riding in a machine driven by her husband, Howard Maugle, proceeding west on Airy street.

Maugle attempted to make a left-hand turn south on Swede street, when his car was in collision with a car driven by Elizabeth W. Miller, sixteen, of Roxborough. The girl had had her driver's license only since July 2. The sides of the two machines came together.

With the girl driver was the owner of the car she was driving, Mrs. Ella W. Hallman, of Norristown, who was not seriously hurt. Mrs. Agnes Groff, also of Norristown, who was in the car, suffered a laceration of the neck and an injury to her left wrist, which were treated at the Montgomery Hospital.

Another German Uprising

By BURNLEY

THE German people, who have been getting more than their share of political battles lately, are due to get a glimpse of some important ring warfare next month when two native sons of the Fatherland, Walter Neusel and Max Schmeling, clash in the most notable heavyweight scrap to be held on the continent in many a year.

Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's hustling pilot, has been exhibiting more enthusiasm over the coming battle than he has shown since his black-rowed better dropped the crown. Jacobs says that this battle between two leading German heavyweights, one a former heavyweight king and the other an outstanding contender, will draw a record gate in Germany. Little Joey is puffing his big cigars at an aggressive angle these days, telling the world that Schmeling will kazo Neusel and then make a successful comeback against his conqueror, Baer.

Most fistic judges are inclined to disagree with Jacobs in this optimistic view of the former champion's chances. Charley Harvey, veteran manager who pilots Steve Hamas, another outstanding heavyweight, thinks that Neusel's awkward, crowding style will bother Schmeling no end.

Paul Damski, pilot of the blond German contender, considers the Schmeling battle as good as won, and is already planning to match Neusel with Hamas or Art Lasky for the right to challenge Max Baer.

Neusel hopes to avenge Max Schmeling's defeat at the hands of Baer, and thus become the second German to ascend the heavyweight throne. Blond Walter, who fights like a bigger edition of Battling Nelson, is tough and strong, with worlds of endurance, and he might give the chesty Mister Baer an uncomfortable time at that.

Golf, too, has its Business Moments

"HEAD DOWN, eye on the ball." When this admonition to yourself brings the reward of a zinging drive up the fairway, a beautiful mashie shot to the green or a twenty-foot putt right into the cup... it's then that the real thrill of the game begins to seep into your veins; the worries of state give way to the pleasant concern of lowering your score; while the fresh air and the exercise pay dividends in health and mental fitness for the battles of life.

"Head down, eye on the ball." But keep your eye also on that other phase so productive of added pleasure—the possession of up-to-date equipment.

August is golf's mid-season. Sales of golfers' requisites are on or imminent. That set of matched irons, that swanky new-fangled bag, those comfortable spiked moccasin-tops, or those look-the-part-of-a-golfer togs—all are beckoning to you from the stores in this city.

Keep your "head down"—and keep the cost of your golf down too. Keep your "eye on the ball"—and on the golfing-supplies advertisements in this newspaper. Shrewd buying—the business phase of your golf—is at hand. Cash in.

P. S.—There are good bargains, too, in equipment for tennis, swimming, camping, fishing, touring.
